PROF. YÜKSEL BAYRAKTAR, HAS JUST PUBLISHED A NEW PAPER IN "SUSTAINABILITY", TITLED "ANALYZING OF ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE BASED ON BIOMEDICAL AND SOCIO-ECONOMIC APPROACH USING MOLECULAR COMMUNICATION, ARTIFICIAL NEURAL NETWORK, AND RANDOM FOREST MODELS"

Prof. Yüksel Bayraktar, has just published a new paper in Sustainability, titled "Analyzing of Alzheimer's Disease Based on Biomedical and Socio-Economic Approach Using Molecular Communication, Artificial Neural Network, and Random Forest Models". In his article, Professor Bayraktar and his co-authors, firstly proposed a molecular communication model with the potential to be used in the treatment and/or diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease, and then analyzed its results with an artificial neural network model. Secondly, the ratio of people suffering from Alzheimer's disease to the total population, along with data of educational status, income inequality, poverty threshold, and the number of the poor in Turkey were subjected to detailed distribution analysis by using the random forest model statistically. As a result of the study, it was determined that a higher income level was causally associated with a lower risk of Alzheimer's disease.

The intergenerational relationship for the elderly is worth examining in many ways. In this sense, it should be asked in the intergenerational relationship how the elder's position in the family or outside the family is. Such a problematic actually means indirectly examining what kind of rights the elderly have. Because the content of the intergenerational relationship, the place and positioning of the elderly in this relationship also requires knowing. On the other hand, in this positioning there are not only rights, but also responsibilities. This study deals with the rights of the elderly in intergenerational relations and what responsibilities they are framed while using these rights.

The study consists of three contexts. In the first, evaluations are made on the "foundation logic" of the akhism and its connection with today. In the second, evaluations are made in the context of the working relations of the ahies. In the third, there are evaluations on the non-working relationships/reflections of the ahies. Thus, it is tried to find an answer to a fundamental question such as whether the morality or possibilities of the akhism are possible today.

In this study, a framework is drawn by taking into account the field of social policy at the scale of Turkiye over COVID-19, which is one of the extraordinary periods. Due to the interdisciplinary aspect of social policy, the framework to be drawn is not limited to the Ministry of Family and Social Services, which is the direct actor of social policy, but also includes other actors related to the consequences of COVID-19 that cause losses and deterioration. The resulting framework is limited to public-private applications only in Turkiye after COVID-19.

"TWO-WAY ANOVA BY USING CHOLESKY DECOMPOSITION AND GRAPHICAL REPRESENTATION" ARTICLE WRITTEN BY PROF. DR. MUSTAFA TEKİN AND RES. ASST. HAYDAR EKELİK, FACULTY MEMBER OF DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMETRICS, WAS PUBLISHED IN THE HACETTEPE JOURNAL OF MATHEMATICS & STATISTICS INDEXED IN SCI-E.

In general, the coefficient estimates of linear models are carried out using the ordinary least squares (OLS) method. Since the analysis of variance is also a linear model, the coefficients can be estimated using the least-squares method. In this study, the coeffi-cient estimates in the two-way analysis of variance were performed by using the Cholesky decomposition. The purpose of using the Cholesky decomposition in finding coefficient estimates make variables used in model being orthogonal such that important variables can be easily identified. The sum of squares in two-way analysis of variance (row, column, interaction) were also found by using the coefficient estimates obtained as a result of the Cholesky decomposition. Thus, important variables that affect the sum of squares can be determined more easily because the Cholesky decomposition makes the variables in the model orthogonal. By representing the sum of squares with vectors, how the prediction vector in two-way ANOVA model was created was shown. It was mentioned how the Cholesky decomposition affected the sum of squares. This method was explained in detail on a sample data and shown geometrically.

The Review of Socio-Economic Perspectives

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC FINANCE PROF.DR NAZAN SUSAM "TRANSFORMATION OF WATER SERVICES: LESSONS LEARNED FROM WATER PRIVATIZATION IN MULTIPLE COUNTRIES" PUBLISHED IN "JOURNAL OF ECONOMY CULTURE AND SOCIETY"

The transformation in water and water services is one of the issues that have entered the world agenda in the last thirty years. Although the recommendations of international organizations affect the water policies of the states, the privatizations realized in the form of public-private cooperation are developing within the framework of the idea of opening new markets for global water companies on the basis of neoliberal policies of international organizations. In this study, in which literature review method was followed, it is aimed to examine the reasons underlying the privatization of water services and the privatization practices within the framework of the examples of different countries. As a result, put aside the countries where privatizations by international organizations are offered as the credit requirement (India, Argentina, Bolivia and Turkey), even in developed countries (France and England) where privatizations are carried out without any coercion, there is not a success in water services management that will be an example for other countries. In contrast, many cities in developed and developing countries have recently passed the water services under the public authorities with remunicipalisation. Briefly, looking at the country examples where privatizations have been experienced, it is seen that they have failed in terms of financing, investment and efficiency. These privatizations could not be an alternative solution to water management, and they also imposed additional financial burdens on countries.

PROF. DR NAZAN SUSAM AND RES. ASSIST. EZGİM ÇARBOĞA SOCIOECONOMICS

In this study, it is aimed to examine the relationship between education expenditures per student and theft crime. When evaluated in Turkey, the concept of crime has been limited to theft, which is among property crimes, due to the increase in the number of convicted persons in the last ten years. In the study, an evaluation was made for Turkey by making use of the education expenditures per student and the data of those convicted of theft crime. In addition, the relationship between crime rates and education expenditures in OECD countries whose data can be accessed was analyzed with the Spearman Rank Correlation Coefficient. As a result of the analysis, a negative and significant relationship was found between the two variables we selected. It has been concluded that there is a negative and significant relationship between the annual expenditures per student at secondary education level and the number of people convicted of theft in Turkey, which has both the lowest expenditure per student and the seriously high number of criminals.

Patent: Mercury removal apparatus
Inventors: Assoc. Prof. Dr. Bora Yıldız, Asst. Prof. Dr. Serdar Semih Coşkun
Invention number: PT2018-01610
Mercury (Hg) element is an input that is used extensively in the chemical industry and is used in the production of various products. Respiratory or dermal absorption of mercury as a result of occupational accidents causes poisoning and threatens employee health. The developed product safely cleans the mercury material scattered in the environment.

Faculty of Economics, Department of Business Administration lecturer Assoc. Dr. Bora YILDIZ has been awarded the 2022/1 term TUBITAK -2219 Post-Doctoral Research Scholarship Abroad. The project, which lasts for 12 months to improve the quality of life of the employees, was carried out by Prof. Dr. Conducted with Alexandra Beauregard.

In the study titled "The Link between Ambidextrous Leadership and Innovative Work Behavior in a Military Organization: The Mediating Role of Climate for Innovation," Bora YILDIZ is a co-author published in the Sustainability, which was indexed in the SSCI-Q2 index. The study examines the impact of ambidextrous leadership on innovative workplace behaviors and the climate for innovation on this relationship in a military organization. The study sample consists of 425 NATO employees in the United States. Research findings revealed that the climate for innovation increases the positive relationship between ambidextrous leadership and innovative work behaviors.

In the study titled "How do compulsory citizenship behaviors affect moral disengagement in organizations? Significance of anger toward the organization during the COVID-19 pandemic" Bora YILDIZ is a co-author published in the Frontiers in Psychology, which was indexed in the SSCI-Q1 index. Drawing on the resource depletion theory, we unpack the mechanism by which compulsory citizenship behaviors influence moral disengagement with the mediation effects of anger toward the organization. The study revealed that compulsory citizenship behaviors positively influenced anger toward the organization and moral disengagement. Further, anger toward the organization mediates the link between compulsory citizenship behaviors and moral disengagement.

In the study titled "Counterintuitive consequences of COVID-19 on healthcare workers: A meta-analysis of the relationship between work engagement and job satisfaction," Bora YILDIZ is a co-author published in the Frontiers in Psychology, which was indexed in the SSCI-Q1 index. In total, 36 individual correlation coefficients were synthesized. The presence of COVID-19 as the significant moderator explained 37.08% of effect size heterogeneity. The presence of COVID-19 has transformed the positive relationship between work engagement and job satisfaction into a negative but statistically non-significant relationship.

In the study titled "A systematic review and meta-analytical synthesis of the relationship between work engagement and job satisfaction in nurses" Bora YILDIZ is a co-author published in the Perspectives in Psychatric Care, which was indexed in the SSCI-2 index. An overall effect size of random-effect model was calculated as r = 0.47 (k = 15, N = 3,818, 95% confidence interval [0.43;0.51]). Data collection method and presence of control variable, as significant moderators, accounted for 43.6% and 43.8%, respectively, of the effect size heterogeneity.
